General Description

This is a very rough and broken township almost entirely mountainous, the slopes of the mountains are covered with volcanic slide rock.
Along the East and South tiers of sections is a scattering growth of cedar timber.
Along Long Valley Creek there are a number of ponds of water. The water runs a short distance then sinks into the gravel then arises further on.
There is a piece of land in sec. 9 fenced in by an Italian; he raises a little fruit by irrigating from a well. He had no dwelling to speak of.
This land is chiefly valuable for grazing purposes.
