

in places thick undergrowth of Manzanita

June 17th 1862

The two Eastern tier of Sections in this township were surveyed when Washoe Lake was frozen over, on account of the marsh and low land bordering the lake being inundated to such a depth as to render it impracticable to make a survey of them, in the Spring, or early part of Summer. The four Western tier of Sections could not be surveyed at the same time, owing to the depth of the snow in the mountains.